What teenaged girl wouldn't like to work up a little appetite by trying on new clothes? We couldn't find anyone who would refuse. We did, however, find a beautiful yet modest young lady who is full of compassion and who was ready to take us up on the offer to try on some new looks.

We met 15-year-old Brenda at Java Jean Bar in Anaheim Hills, California for an afternoon of shopping and dining at this bistro and boutique with owner

Michelle Macis as Brenda's fashion consultant and personal shopper.

Brenda got to try on the hottest new fashions that you'd see on today's hottest stars. Brenda tried on a multitude of clothes -- from "Million Dollar" raw denim jeans to different tops and shoes of various kinds. Brenda was initially a little shy and perhaps a little overwhelmed at the lavish attention she received. After all, most children in foster care aren't used to expecting a whole lot.

Brenda was gifted with a few of her favorite outfits, but the one item she continues to shop for is a permanent family to call her own. And just like choosing the right “look”, Brenda has some ideas of what she is looking for in a family -- after all, this most valuable asset is something she’s been dreaming about for awhile.

English is not Brenda’s first language, so she would love to have a family that would continue to help her develop in her secondary language as well as helping her preserve her Latino culture and language. Equally important, Brenda wants a supportive family that will help nurture her college goals in becoming a nurse some day.

If Brenda seems like she might be the right fit for your family, please give us a call. Brenda made her final outfit selections at Java Jean Bar, but we continue to seek the right forever family for her.
